About

Tomer Raif is a partner and heads the firm's Litigation and Dispute Resolution department, with a specialization in a variety of legal services in the field of civil, commercial, and administrative litigation. These include proceedings and petitions before all instances of the Israeli jurisprudence system, as well as representing parties in arbitration and mediation.

Clients benefit from Tomer's extensive experience in relation to tenders, advising on all stages of the tender process from preliminary stages all the way to filing administrative appeals on behalf of leading commercial companies to the Administrative Court, as well as defending winning bids against challenges to the results of the tender.

In complex class actions, Tomer has substantial experience in representing corporations facing issues in consumer law, banking, communications, and food standardization in Israel. He represents leading corporations (including various nonprofits) and individuals in administrative appeals as well as appeals to the Israeli High Court of Justice, involving administrative, tenders, and local authorities' laws.

Tomer advises some of the most prominent companies in the Israeli market, as well as international companies, shareholders and management, from the initial stages of conflict until its final resolution by judgment or settlement.

Tomer also provides pro-bono legal services, including defending human rights and representing various voluntary organizations, such as "Access Israel." The voluntary activity includes bringing class action claims and appeals to the High Court of Justice. This activity has led to significant legal achievements with respect to the rights of people with disabilities in Israel.
